

matters from start to finish, and in the third had the Akron man running around the ring, he got a heavy pounding himself. He was a little fellow beside Ruhlin, and the giant's blows jarved him whenever they landed. In the second battle Carter got a worse pounding.

Then there were other fights. Some he won and some he lost, but in all of them he went on the old give-and-take principle. To-day Carter, although he waighs 175 pounds, could hardly give Harting Nelson a fight. As the sporting man say: "He can't take the gaft."

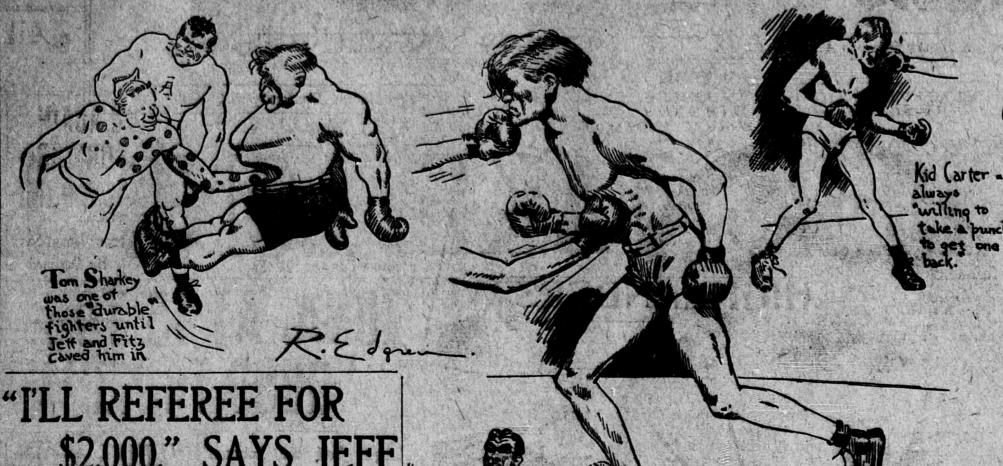

Tor CHOYNEKI was once a great fighter. He had cleverness, but was always wilking to stand toe to toe with any one and hammer away. Now he has a "glass jaw." He can't take a tap on the point of the chin without dropping to the floor, He was good enough once to drop Fitzsimmons and nearly put him away and to meet Jeffies, a giant, who outweighed him sixty pounds, on even terms. But the old willingness to take pumishment spoiled Choynski like all the others.

Terry McGovern used to stop some hard punches with his chin. He always builed his way in, throwing off blow:
